"Between The Block & The Burbs" — Mixtape | Stadium Gods: Origins — LP

ARTIST BIO

Joe Young is a Northeast DC-born, Prince George's County-raised artist with more than forty years of lived experience behind his music. Raised in a household shaped by both love and instability, he learned early how to survive through observation and build through discipline. His grandmother sold two homes to relocate the family — that sacrifice became the foundation of everything that followed.

He was performing at sixteen, producing at nineteen, and has spent his career building businesses alongside music because he understood that ownership matters as much as talent. He now performs with a full four-piece live band, creating music rooted in survival, sacrifice, and resilience — for people who built real lives from difficult beginnings.

"Not just a dream. A plan."

KEY ANGLES & TALKING POINTS

■ Being 40 & Still Rapping

Joe Young isn't chasing youth — he's owning age. At 40+, he represents a generation of artists who lived what they rap about. His music speaks to grown listeners navigating real responsibilities while holding onto identity. This is not a comeback; it's a graduation.

■ The Indie Artist Blueprint

Joe is vocal about what independent artists must do to survive and thrive in today's landscape. His message is clear: stop waiting on a label to validate you. He is actively demonstrating the power of physical copies and promotional merchandise — creating tangible touchpoints that streaming alone cannot replicate. If you want a movement, build one with something people can hold.

■ DMV Music — The Rise, The Setback, The Reckoning

The DMV (DC, Maryland, Virginia) has produced undeniable talent, from Go-Go to the underground rap scene to chart-topping artists — yet the region has historically been overlooked by major industry infrastructure. Joe Young speaks to this directly: the culture is real, the talent is real, but the lack of unified support systems has cost the region its moment more than once. His work aims to change that narrative by building up other talents from inside the DMV.

■ Mentorship Through Music

Beyond his own artistry, Joe Young uses his platform to guide emerging indie talents. His angle as an established DMV veteran who helps other artists is central to his brand — he is not just releasing music, he is building an ecosystem for independent creators to own their craft and their income.
